The week will begin with this ques-

There is now little doubt that these proceedings will be of a very animated character—probably no less so than those of Friday and possibly more so.

All efforts to compromise the differences on the tariff and to allay the feelings engendered by the president's letter to Mr. Wilson, have so far been unavalling, and unless an unusual offort is made and exceptional success secured between this time and the hour of meeting, the day's session will develop a series of interesting speeches, which bid fair to be characterized by words both plain and pointed. Democratic senators generally agree that there is now no prospelt of reaching an understanding in the party before immorrow's session, and this cannot be done until the temper of the Senator shall be still further exploited before the country.

motion he will take issue with those who consider it out of order, and will contend that a ruling to sustain the point of order would be unconstitutional, saying the greater privilege of moving to amend a bill in conference by reading from an entire amendment carries with it the lesser privelege of receding from a part of any amendment.

The Texas and Wisconsin senators are regarded as the especial champions of the president on the issue now at stake, and it is intimated one of the reasons they have, apart from their convictions on the question for championing the movement, is the desire to meet and by their actions on account of their relations to the executive, refute the charge which has been made in certain quarters that the president's letter was intended to

With the tariff bill disposed of in whatever way, the Senate will take up the sundry civil and general deficiency appropriation bills, if they shall be reported from the committee. These are the only appropriation oills which the Senate has not passed upon. An effort will be made by the committee to have the sundry civil bill ready to submit to the Senate early in the week. It will carry a large number of changes and is liable to cause considerable debate when taken up.

For the rest, there is a long calendar waiting the attention of the Senate.

point is sure to be raised at some time, if it is not presented at the beginning of the debate.

It is a generally recognized fact that there are several senators who are determined to speak on the general questions which the publication of Mr. Cleveland's letter has raised, and that these speeches will find vent in some other connection, if not in that. Unless the senators who are expected to speak change their minds, there will be no mineing of words when the talk shall begin. Senator Gorman is slated for a speech during the day, and those who are in his confidence say the president's letter is directly directed toward himself, and that his utterances will be country, and to decide upon the policy to be pursued to bring about the change in the monetary policy of the government necessary to restore prosperity to the people."

Senator Voorhees, Brice and Lindary are among the other Democratic fenators who may speak during the day, and many others, including Senators Hill and Vilas, will probably participate in the morning debate.

Mr. Brice had expected to speak on Friday, but was cut off by adjournment, and he now says that circumstances will decide whether he shall talk at all. It is also indefinite as yet whether Messrs. Voorhees and Lindsay will make addresses at this juncture.

The best advices indicate that when the chair rules it out, the ruling will be sustained but this will depend largely upon Republican votes. Some of the Democrat senators, friendly to the inotion, assert the Republican vote will be cast against such ruling, but this does not appear probable.

If the motion should be declared out of order there will be an effort to remoit the bill to the conference committee without instructing. It now appears quite certain that the advocates of the motion will exhaust all partial mentary resources to have instructions given as implied by the motion. If they should not succeed in this there bountry at large, that the facts should be known.

New York, July 22—For two hours this evening, the summer visitors along the northern coast in the vicinity of Scahrint raced up and down the shore watching five men clinging to the cross-trees of their vessel, which had just gone down, it was but twenty-five minutes from the time the hardy life savers put out from the beach on their errand of mercy until they had reached the wreck and the imperiled sallors. One after another was taken from the rigging, but to the waiting thousands on the beach and bluffs it seemed as though hours had elapsed. The vessel was a two-masted schooner, the Robert H. Mitchell, of Baltimore, bound from New York to Norfolk. She carried 150 tons of salt in bulk. She had spring a leak and was rapidly settling when a distress signal was hoisted and the captain and crew climbed into the rigsing, where they clung until reacued.
